GLOBAL RESEARCH PROGRAM

The program provides students an opportunity to engage in research with professors, present their research projects, and publish their work in the U of U Global High School Research Review. Students live in on-campus housing and are given SAT prep classes in the evening.

GLOBAL LEADERSHIP PROGRAM

The program gives international high school students skills to be leaders of tomorrow. Students receive lectures and training from experts and professors who specialize in leadership. Students live in on-campus housing and learn about American culture by engaging in community activities and also in conversational lessons with University of Utah students. Outdoor activities such as hiking, camping, and rafting are also available to help build team leadership while experiencing Utah’s natural beauty. As a culminating experience, students present their findings and submit a summary to the class.

GLOBAL CAMPUS PROGRAM

Through this program, students have the opportunity to visit American high school campuses and the University of Utah. Each visiting student is partnered with an American student host upon arrival. Visiting students attend classes with the American student host. After the program finishes, the visitor students and host students continue to maintain friendships via email or social networks by sharing ideas and thoughts to expand their perspectives of the world. They experience the University of Utah by touring the campus and attending a lecture.
